Washington, D.C. – Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) and jobsite123.com today announced the expansion of FindContractors.com, ABC’s online member directory, providing construction users with member company listings including current and completed project portfolios, insurance coverage and bonding capacity, licenses and certifications and client portfolio ratings.

This comprehensive directory is part of the much larger strategic partnership formed between ABC and jobsite123.com in March 2010 with the goal of expanding construction contractors’ visibility through showcasing their qualifications and industry relationships directly to industry buyers via the Internet. The detailed information displayed in each company’s profile answers the most common questions asked by today’s buyers.

“jobsite123.com’s goal is to create a new industry standard for construction firms to qualify and market to each other through online tools such as ABC’s FindContractors.com and our own website, jobsite123.com,” said Coty Fournier, CEO of jobsite123.com. “jobsite123.com’s technology provides a comprehensive web profiling system for the commercial construction industry that easily connects buyers and sellers of construction services.”

“This new partnership doubles the exposure of ABC member firms through jobsite123.com’s technology, expanding member firms’ exposure to a wider variety of prospective customers on both sites,” said Todd Mann, ABC’s chief operating officer. “These online resource directories are great business development tools for companies seeking contacts and business partners, particularly in this challenging economic environment.”
